THE AMANIANS.

The Amania Society is the name of a very flourishing community in Iowa, consisting of fifteen hundred members. They own everything in common, and present an admirable example of the success of the co-operative plan when intelligently administered. These people were ligently administered. These people were formerly know as Ebenezers, and lived near Buffalo, N.Y., where they possessed six thousand acres of land. They sold out some fifteen years ago for the sum of five millions of dollars, and moved to Iowa. They are located near Homestead station, on the Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, where they own thirty thous-and acres of the choicest lands. They have seven distinct settlements, and their affairs are managed by fifteen trustees or fathers. The society is incorporated under State laws. At convenient distances in the settlements they have restaurants, to which the various families resort for

The Amanians cling to their good old German ways in dress and general hab-its, and are not in bondage to the outside world. All have an equal interest in the property; individuals are not allowed anything for their services, or furnished with money for their private use. Each settlement has a store, and all are allow-ed to draw a certain amount yearly from it for their private wants. A man with a family is allowed $50, with $20 for his wife and $10 for each child. This is expected to keep them in clothing and household furniture, and supply all their little personal needs. When persons find that the amoudt appropriated is not sufficient for their acturl expenses, the mat-ter can be laid before the Board of Trustees, who will exercise their judgment about making an additional appropriation.

They are temperate, industrious, religious people, but it is difficult to define their theological views.

A leading principle in the society is that all will get along well together if every one will do right; and in this spirit, everything is managed harmoniously. There is no better theology than this after all.

It is their custom to meet every day in small companies, about the settlement, and in rooms provided for the purpose, to devote half an hour to religious exer-cises; on Wednesday they meet in the day; Sunday they all come together in their meeting-house for religious services. They do not appear to specially favor marraige, and many of them are living single. When young people wish to marry, they generally receive the consent of the society if they have a reputation for good behavior. If the parties have not succeeded in commending themselves, they are not allowed to marry.

The society owns the whole settlement, and carries on all the business, including that of the lumber yard, store, hotel, etc.
They hire considerably on their farm and in factories, and claim that even in Iowa, with 3,000 acres of choice land, farming operations do not pay. About three miles from Homestead, on the Des Moines river, they have a fine water power, flouring and woolen mills, and manufacture an extra quality of yarns and fine flannels in colors. The latter goods stand high in the market, and are mostly bought by a few first class retail-ers in the large cities. The Amanians have a high reputation for uprightness in all their dealings with the outside world, and are much respected.
